The U.S. Government reserves for itself the right to stop performance on any contract that it determines is no longer needed. This is reflected in the “termination” clause in your contract and it is always in your contract. This conference will address why the Government has a right to terminate its contract under Federal laws and what to do when faced with a termination notice.

Attendees Will Learn:

- Why the government has a right to terminate its contracts under federal law
- How this right differs as between primes and subs
- What to do when faced with a termination for convenience
- What to do about, and how to anticipate, a termination for default
- What choices exist for settlement proposals
- Dealing with property and security clearances after a termination
- What you can do to be prepared for a possible termination

Meeting Location: *Four Points by Sheraton, 8110 Aero Drive
