

THE CHANGES CLAUSES

Unilateral contract modifications— at the Buyer’s discretion!

presented by:

Jim Southerland and Friend

Your Government contract can be changed at any time at the discretion of the contracting officer within the scope of the "changes" clause. There are many different changes clauses in the prime contract depending on the contract type (FFP, CR, or T&M) that when flowed down, may allow the prime contractor to increase the scope of what they can change unilaterally and still be in scope. The prime contractor or subcontractor is required by the changes clause to proceed with the work as changed while an equitable adjustment to the price and schedule is determined by the parties. Session 1 of this seminar will cover the various changes clauses for goods and services, under all different types of contracts, other clauses that cause changes that must be negotiated, and how to control and manage contract scope creep and constructive changes that can result from "working with the COTR". Session 2 will take the attendee through the process of proposing and negotiating the equitable adjustments associated with these changes.
